A country that is blessed with both gorgeous scenery and people, and some of the most cost-effective and Western-trained medical practitioners in the world. Thailand should be your destination for inexpensive medical or cosmetic procedures this winter. The scent of jasmine essential oil is in the air wherever you travel in this magical land, and the exotic blend of essential oils they use on your body for massages will leave you with physical memories that are almost carnal!

What's That Price Again?

A recent American tourist in Rayong, Thailand, needed to get an in-grown hair on his thigh, which had blistered and become infected, removed immediately. He went to a local medical clinic, where the nurses and doctor spoke perfect English, and had the outpatient surgery done in ten minutes time. The total cost, including antibiotics and pain killers, came to $25.00. In the United States such a procedure would, first of all, taken a week to schedule, and even with insurance, the deductible would have amounted to over one-thousand-dollars. Is it any wonder that more and more 'farangs' (Thai for foreigner) decide to snub their own country's outrageous and uncaring medical system for the far less expensive and much more caring medical attention they can get in Thailand? Especially at a world-class hospital such as Bumrungrad International Hospital, in the heart of Bangkok. They have a price list for medical procedures that you'll hardly believe!

Golden Sun and Sand for Just Pennies!

It's no secret that Thailand is as close to a tropical paradise as you can get in this day and age. The gorgeously decorated Buddhist temples around virtually every street corner; the beautiful smiles that Thai men, women and children freely give to you on the street; the savory, pungent Thai cuisine, so cheap that a plate of shrimp fried rice costs as little as 95-cents per serving, and it comes to you wrapped in a banana leaf. The beaches in Thailand are spectacular, and there are enough of them, free of charge, for anyone to find an isolated stretch for their own private swim and meditation at sunrise or sunset at any time of the year. There's sophisticated night life in Bangkok and private Buddhist lessons at monasteries in Chiang Mai or Khon Kaen. The Chatachuck Market in Bangkok displays exotic merchandise from around the world, things you'd never even THINK of finding back at Walmart. A complete body massage will set you back just a few dollars.

So if you are thinking of having a medical procedure done, or some cosmetic surgery, you need to give serious thought to coming over to Thailand to have it performed. There are numerous family-owned-and-run homestay apartments within minutes of Bumrungrad International Hospital, where you can rent a beautiful serviced apartment for as little as $165,00 on a weekly basis; there you can recuperate in peace and quiet, waited on by a friendly Thai staff, who will think of you, and treat you, like one of their own family. Make sure to rent an apartment in a family compound setting – it offers the best security and quietest surroundings. Bring your spouse and loved ones along for the trip – they'll love every minute of their vacation while you are taken care of. The Thai staff will help you get your laundry done and bring you delicious, nourishing Thai meals that will speed your recovery. And another wonderful aspect of Thai culture is that these sympathetic, patient and friendly people do not like to be tipped.

The Land of Ten Thousand Smiles.

Once you're up and about again you'll want to spend some time seeing the sights, either right in Bangkok or around the country. Either way, transportation is convenient and inexpensive. You can take an air-con bus to any of the larger towns in Thailand, sitting back in air-conditioned comfort as the verdant Thai countryside whisks by. All Thais study English starting in grade school, so you'll always be able to find someone to strike up an interesting conversation with, or who can help you with a question or problem. Crime is a non-issue in almost all of Thailand, and the country has one of the longest, most stable constitutional monarchies in the world.

So come and get healthy again in Thailand, and then enjoy yourself for just a few dollars a day!
